Paul's First Letter to the Corinthians features the famous hymn:

Love is patient, love is kind.

It is not jealous, it is not pompous,

It is not inflated, it is not rude,

It does not seek its own interests,

It is not quick-tempered,

it does not brood over injury,

It does not rejoice over wrongdoing

but rejoices with the truth.

It bears all things, believes all things,

hopes all things, endures all things.

Love never fails.

Frequently heard at weddings, I sometimes consider how different people encounter this reading differently. For a couple commencing their lives together, to find “true love” is an exciting adventure heard in the courage and idealism lying underneath these words. For couples a few years along the road of married love, I can see eyes turned to their children as they hear that love is not quick-tempered, nor does it brood over injury. For those who are single, it can be a checklist of desired traits one is looking for in a partner. For those who find themselves after a marriage, by widowhood or perhaps even divorce, sometimes one can find the whispers of regret. Those who are given to religious vocations even have a way of finding God in what is carefully hewn out of all these words, like a statue emerging from fine marble.

Christian Love is a virtue, for which we may use the word caritas — the origin of the English term “charity.” But Love is still more than that. The Greeks had nearly a dozen words that can commonly be translated into English as “love.” Here’s some of them:

“philia” — the love of deep friendship (Philadelphia) or, in more modern terminology, of pathological affections (paraphilias),

“eros”— the love of sexual passion, or “erotic” love,

“pragma”— the long-standing love of cooperation or compromise,

“storge”— familial or habitual love,

“mania”— obsessive, possessive love,

“philautia”— love of self (both in a positive and in a negative sense),

“xenia”— love seen in hospitality towards strangers and guests, often ritualistic, altruism, and finally,

“agape”— which is the term most frequently found in Scripture, speaking of the unconditional love of God for His children. Philosophically and theologically, one may consider

Thomas Aquinas who reckons “agape” as “willing the good for another with no reciprocal gain expected in return.”

St. John tells us that the very essence of God is Love — and we can see the fingerprint of God in each of these words of love in this “language of love” which comes to us from our Greek forbearers. (Indeed, we can even taste some of the loss and confusion flowing from words that speak of pathological states of love... such as excessive self regard or the psychological ailments which flow from misdirected love.)

I often point out in wedding homilies how it is said that the Eskimo people have several dozen words that we can translate as snow... because snow and the recognition of different types (wet and heavy, icy, sleety, rime-y, etc.) is important to that culture and society. Is it a sign of cultural impoverishment that we have so few good words to express love in contemporary American society — a society searching so earnestly for true love?

We love pizza, we love music playing on the radio. We love gatherings with family and friends, we love our dogs and cats, we love our parents and spouses and children, and we love God. Are there better ways to sort through our passions and our longings and priorities? What does love really mean to me? Does love for God help me understand better my obligations for love of neighbor, and vice versa? What is the love-language that informs my Christian journey. Having some insight into this question may provide further insight on how we can keep growing, in all ages of life, in authentic Christian love.

A Message from Mrs. Carol Frericks—Principal

Third Grade Teaches the Ten Virtues of Mary

During the month of January our third grade class along with their teacher, Mrs. Meg Benner, taught our school the ten virtues of the most Holy Virgin Mary and how to pray the Hail Mary in a chaplet that includes these virtues. We can find the Ten Evangelical Virtues of the Blessed Virgin Mary recorded in the Gospels. There, she is presented as the Most Holy Virgin Mary — an evangelical model for the whole Church, who is Most Pure, Most Prudent, Most Humble, Most Faithful, Most Devout, Most Obedient, Most Poor, Most Patient, Most Merciful, and Most Sorrowful. Our third grade class showed us how Mary's Ten Evangelical Virtues are typically presented in the shape of a ten-ray star. The star has spiritual meaning as the morning star, in which Mary is radiating her Ten Evangelical Virtues and inviting us to be inspired and guided by her glorious example on our journey to heaven.
