Sirach 3:17-18,20,28-29;
Hebrews 12:18-19,22-24a;
Luke 14:1,7-14

The spirit of faith is completely opposite the spirit of this world. This world tells us that you are what you make of yourself. This has a true sense, for we must work to achieve anything in this world. But our faith tells us that God's grace and love must come before any action of ours.

Surely, we must always cooperate with God's grace, but his moving grace comes first. The world emphasizes positive self-image; just imagine that you can be someone, and you can become what you want. But faith tells us that we must first of all have a "God-image." We must realize that God loves us with an everlasting love.

Although we may be nothing of ourselves and by ourselves, God has given us a precious, intrinsic dignity as his children. Although we are weak and sinful, God calls us to be perfect. And he empowers us to achieve this holiness. Except for God's grace, we are woeful sinners. But in his grace we can do all things.

This world would have us measure ourselves by our accomplishments; the worldling wants to call attention to himself. Faith teaches us to keep our good deeds secret, to call attention only to God's glory.

Our faith life begins with humility. Humility is truth. It is a recognition that, before God, we are nothing. Humility does not hide our faults nor our talents. But humility recognizes that all our talents come from God, and all our faults are from ourselves.

Humility can be faked. Sometimes people want to appear to be humble, whereas they are really arrogant hypocrites. Uriah Heep comes to mind. Politicians also put on the "humble act" around election time. They want to appear to be of the common people, whereas often they are filled with pride. Today's Mass is a meditation on humility. Let us daily pray for this gift, which is the basis of all other virtues.

22ND SUNDAY IN ORDINARY TIME

LABOUR DAY: Pope Leo XIII on the Duties of the Worker and the Employer

In 1891, Pope Leo XIII gave the world a social encyclical, Rerum Novarum, which discusses the relationships and mutual duties between labor and capital. The foundations of the Catholic Social Teachings are considered to have been laid by this encyclical. As part of the Labour Day celebration (and if you like, reflection), it is worth while to spend a few of your minutes on what Pope Leo XIII said in the Rerum Novarum on the Duties of the Worker and the Employer:

“Of these duties, the following bind the proletarian and the worker: fully and faithfully to perform the work which has been freely and equitably agreed upon; never to injure the property, nor to outrage the person, of an employer; never to resort to violence in defending their own cause, nor to engage in riot or disorder; and to have nothing to do with men of evil principles, who work upon the people with artful promises of great results, and excite foolish hopes which usually end in useless regrets and grievous loss.

The following duties bind the wealthy owner and the employer: not to look upon their work people as their bondsmen, but to respect in every man his dignity as a person ennobled by Christian character. They are reminded that, according to natural reason and Christian philosophy, working for gain is creditable, not shameful, to a man, since it enables him to earn an honorable livelihood; but to misuse men as though they were things in the pursuit of gain, or to value them solely for their physical powers - that is truly shameful and inhuman.

Again, justice demands that, in dealing with the working man, religion and the good of his soul must be kept in mind. Hence, the employer is bound to see that the worker has time for his religious duties; that he be not exposed to corrupting influences and dangerous occasions; and that he be not led away to neglect his home and family, or to squander his earnings.

Furthermore, the employer must never tax his work people beyond their strength, or employ them in work unsuited to their sex and age. His great and principal duty is to give everyone what is just. Doubtless, before deciding whether wages are fair, many things have to be considered; but wealthy owners and all masters of labor should be mindful of this - that to exercise pressure upon the indigent and the destitute for the sake of gain, and to gather one's profit out of the need of another, is condemned by all laws, human and divine. To defraud any one of wages that are his due is a great crime which cries to the avenging anger of Heaven. "Behold, the hire of the laborers... which by fraud has been kept back by you, crieth; and the cry of them hath entered into the ears of the Lord of Sabaoth" (James 5:4).

Lastly, the rich must religiously refrain from cutting down the workmen's earnings, whether by force, by fraud, or by usurious dealing; and with all the greater reason because the laboring man is, as a rule, weak and unprotected, and because his slender means should in proportion to their scantiness be accounted sacred. Were these precepts carefully obeyed and followed out, would they not be sufficient of themselves to keep under all strife and all its causes?"

– Rerum Novarum, Encyclical of Pope Leo XIII on Capital and Labour, 1891, no. 20.

Happy Labour Day Celebration!

Fr. Ken Ahanonu

Thought for the Week: You are doing your job and no one cares to know who is doing it because things are in order. You are doing well. Keep it up.

You are doing your job and people are eager to know the hand behind the wheel for recognition and appreciation; you are doing exceptionally well. Please, maintain the tempo.

You are doing your job and people are dissatisfied and complain; you really need to sit up, brace up and turn over a new leaf. From Fr. Kenneth Ahanonu.
