A Message from Fr. Tom Donovan:

Twentieth century philosophers have a term that has escaped faculty lounges and the pages of their journals, in an attempt to name the dread that lives deep at the heart of the human experience. “Existential angst” refers to a suite of human fears that bring discomfort to those who reflect deeply upon their lives and their existence. First and foremost, ‘existential angst’ confronts the reality that our time in life is finite and that death is inescapable. This generates an urgency which is contradicted by the seeming-meaningless of it all. Our lives are the most valuable gift that we perceive, yet the universe seems so indifferent to our choices, our reality, our history, and our destiny. This produces a sense of isolation, in that no matter how much effort we expend, we are still alone in our own minds and consciousnesses, desperately yearning for connection and yet profoundly alone. In these contexts, the modern philosopher Jean-Paul Sartre famously said that the human person is “condemned to be free”. That is, that the freedom we have to be whatever we can make ourselves to be is unmoored by a script or a set of directions or even a purpose. Thus, we bear complete responsibility for the absolute freedom that we bear. Whew. If you sense the darkness, then yeah, you ‘get it’.

The story of the Raising of Lazarus is perhaps the most profound narrative in all of scripture that addresses the raw feelings of this ‘angst’. It doesn’t sugar-coat fear and loss and isolation with platitudes, but instead enters into the very bleakness of the human condition and makes some critical adjustments to our understanding of this experience. 1) It accepts the reality of the grief of separation and isolation. Jesus does not scold Mary who laments, “if you were only here, my brother would not have died”. Does God not care? Is he unable to act? Does he wish this evil? This story validates all of these feelings and then invites us to look at the divine response. 2) Rather than remaining impassive, we hear the words “Jesus wept”. It is not a theological lecture or effort of distraction. We see that Jesus does not stand aloof from the terror of human existence, but he enters into the socio-emotional isolation and feels its agonizing weight alongside us. 3) We hear Jesus say, somewhat echoing the response of our Lord to the suffering of the man born blind from last week, that “this sickness will not end in death. No, it is for God’s glory, so that God’s Son may be glorified through it” Like the response to the question of the sin underlying the Blind Man’s suffering, Jesus says that Lazarus’ illness and death serves a divine purpose, and is not a meaningless consequence of an uncaring or hostile universe. 4) Jesus then attacks the deepest root of the angst found in the finality of the tomb.... the literal, actual tomb where the body wastes away (“surely Lord there will be a stench!”)... Jesus proclaims, “I am the resurrection and the life.. The one who believes in me will live, even though they die...” Jesus claims a finality over the grave and thus physical death becomes a threshold that not only gives meaning, but invites a different way to see one’s existence in God.

Soren Kierkegaard, in reflecting on these very lines arrives at the interesting conclusion that existential angst might be the sign of something more. We might call it the ‘friction point’ between your finite, decaying body, and your infinite, eternal soul. If you were only an animal, you could eat and sleep and be content, not caring about mortality. But Kierkegaard reasons that the fact one knows this dread of existence is perhaps a sign that helps human beings know that they were made for more?

This week our St. Dominic students will receive the Sacrament of Reconciliation at school, and our second graders will have a special celebration for receiving the sacrament for the first time.

Next weekend, Palm Sunday, priests of the deanery will gather to hear confessions at Blessed Sacrament Church, starting at 2 p.m. until all are heard.

During Holy Week, I will plan to hear confessions at additional times through the week. These times will be listed in next week’s bulletin.

Third Grade Leaders Teach About Gentleness and Moderation

During the month of March, our third-grade leaders, along with their teacher, Mr. Kevin Genenbacher, are teaching our K-8 students about the Fruit of the Holy Spirit – GENTLENESS, and the virtue for each week. On March 17, St. Patrick's Day, the class introduced the virtue of moderation during Morning Assembly. They also taught us that GENTLENESS can be expressed by singing a joyful, gentle rain song. Our entire school enjoyed a visit from St. Patrick, also known as Mr. Thoele, our favorite Crossing Guard.

Upcoming Events

St. Anthony of Padua Church and St. Dominic School announces an opening for a new position which I am tentatively calling: "Director of Parish Outreach and Engagement". This job and ministry, reporting to the pastor, is intended to expand our Stewardship, Mission, and Ministry outreach efforts to our parishioners, taking charge of activities such as Communio, youth ministry, the Order of Christian Initiation of Adults (OCIA), Vacation Bible School (VBS), liturgical ministry training and scheduling, the organization and support of small faith-sharing groups, as well as coordinating more formal programming for adult religious formation. This role may be available to assist in religious education ministries at St. Dominic School and with the parish-based Families of Faith programming, but is formally separate from these efforts. Finally, the employee would be a liaison for our upcoming Centennial Campaign, receiving guidance from and providing assistance to our professional Campaign directors. This will be a half-time to full-time position, and the applicant should be an active, participating member of St. Anthony parish. Expected salary range will be $20-45k depending on part-time or full-time status, and will also include for FT employees, eligibility for diocesan benefits, summarized here: <https://dio.org/wp-content/uploads/2025/01/Benefits-Flyer-1.pdf>. Please provide a letter of interest as well as a resume to the parish office. The application window will close on April 1 or when the position is filled. For further information, please contact the parish office at (217) 222-5996.
